Search for new Provost continues

Beth Plevyak
Flyer Staff Writer

Last semester, SSU's Provost, Dr. Phillip D. Creighton, resigned to take on the responsibilities as the President of Eastern Oregon State University, leaving his position up for hire. A 15 member committee, comprised of faculty, staff and students, was formed and is in progress of reviewing candidates to fill the position.

The Provost search was a nationwide search. After conducting phone interviews and checking references, the committee has narrowed it down to five candidates that they will be meeting with throughout the month.

Vice President of Student Affairs, Dr. Carol Williamson, and co-chair of the Provost search committee, said that the Provost is "the most responsible position at the University, after the President."

Provost duties include hiring faculty members, setting budgets for departments, and fulfilling the President's role on absence.

The arrival of the first candidate, Dr. Louis Esposito, was last Thursday. During his two day stay, Esposito was led on a tour of the campus by student leaders. On Friday, an open forum was held as Esposito talked with and answered questions from students, faculty and staff.

Students also had the opportunity to eat lunch with the candidate in the Bistro. The remaining candidates will follow a similar reviewing process this month and all students are invited to attend the open forums and lunches.

Student Government Association President and search committee member John Pritchett said, "One of the reasons why it is important for students to be involved in the selection process is because the Provost makes decisions about academic programs and grading policies."

As Provost at the University of Massachusetts Boston, Esposito claims he is an effective communicator, focused on promoting effective teaching and learning. He is committed to an open, collaborative and collegial style of leadership, but is not afraid to take risks.

Today, Dr. J. Michael Adams, Dean at Drexel University, will be wrapping up his stay at SSU.

On Thursday, Dr. Margaret Lucas will visit the campus. In her proposal letter, Lucas states her need to be accessible to students. She feels that, through her experiences working at various academic institutions, students enjoy informal gatherings, which provide a tremendous learning experience for everyone involved.

The fourth candidate to be reviewed is Dr. William Pearman, Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs at the University of Hawaii at Hilo. He claims he is a strong believer in academic freedom and participatory management, and is deeply committed to diversity.

On Dec. 1 and 2, the final candidate, Dr. Mary Lee Seibert, Associate Provost at Ithaca College in New York, will be reviewed. Seibert feels the best way to conduct the business of the academy is with candor and honesty.

After meeting with each candidate and reviewing feedback, the search committee will reconvene and send the names of the top three nominees to President William Merwin. Merwin will then decide on the new Provost of SSU, effective in the spring 1999 semester.

Any student who does not have a meal card and would like to eat lunch at the scheduled time with a candidate may pick up a meal pass. Students can also express their opinions about the candidates via e-mail to the SGA.

"It is very important for students to come out and attend the meetings and be involved in the process," said Pritchett.

Remodeled house site of new Admissions Office

Jen Payne
Flyer Staff Writer

Every day SSU is working to expand. The University's latest attempt to expand is the renovation of a Camden Avenue home planned to be the site of a new Admissions Office.

The new site is located directly across the street from Nanticoke Residence Hall and is still in the process of reconstruction. However, when it is finished, it will be the place where the primary work with perspective students is done.

Currently, the Admissions department is located in Holloway Hall, spread out in three locations, on two separate floors. The current situation has caused students much confusion in the past.

Moving into a house will finally allow the department to be together in one centralized area, while freeing up offices and parking on campus.

The house consists of three floors plus a basement.

The first floor contains a greeting and reception area, a room used for multimedia presentations, and two offices.

Seven offices and a technical support room make up the second floor.

The third floor houses a conference room and a student workroom.

In addition, the basement offers storage and a mail room, complete with a conveyor belt. The house is handicapped accessible and will contain an elevator.

The admissions office currently employs seven professional staff members, six clerical workers, and six student staff members, at any particular time.

All together, the office is the place of employment for 80 part-time students. Allowing them to finally work together will hopefully create unity in the staff, and simply make things more convenient.

Having an Admissions House will not be something unique to SSU.

The new Admissions House, which is still under construction, is located on Camden Avenue, across the street from SSU.

Many other University campuses contain Admissions Houses for the same reason SSU decided to create one. In fact, those involved visited other campuses to get ideas on how to develop one.

The creation of the Admissions House is just another example of the growth on SSU's campus. By expanding, the school is expanding facilities, and stronger day by day.

•On Tuesday, Nov. 10, a state appeals court overturned the 1996 decision granting O.J. Simpson custody of his children Sydney, 13, and Justin, 10. The move ordered a new trial under a different judge, who must consider evidence suggesting Simpson may have slain their mother. The children's lawyer, Marjorie Fuller, said that the children prefer to live with their father, and that they feel like the rope in a tug of war. Simpson told MSNBC that he will fight to keep his children.

•On Wednesday, Nov. 11, President Clinton ordered Stealth fighters, giant bombers and additional troops to the Persian Gulf as he warned Iraq to comply with U.N. weapons inspectors. At the Pentagon, officials said most of the B-52 heavy bombers and F-117 Stealth fighter jets ordered to the Gulf would reach their destination early this week.

•On Friday, Nov. 13, President Clinton agreed to pay Paula Jones $850,000 to drop her sexual harassment lawsuit. Attorneys for both sides signed a deal for a cash payment, no apology or admission included, said Jones' lawyer. It was Clinton's sworn deposition for the Jones case that lead to the impeachment hearings that are set to begin this week in the House Judiciary Committee.

•On Friday,

Nov. 13, a baby only minutes old was found abandoned in a bathroom trash can at the Tulsa Zoo in Oklahoma. Zoo workers discovered the infant in the gift shop women's room. A woman told an employee that a friend of hers was having trouble in the restroom and someone should be sent to clean up. The mother, a juvenile, was tracked down by police and admitted to a hospital. Police said charges will be filed when she is released.

•On Wednesday, Oct. 28, Billy Harris, a Towson University student was found dead in his room on the third floor of Tower A residence hall. Baltimore County Police are investigating the death as a suicide. Family and friends of Harris, as well as Towson faculty and staff, gathered last Tuesday night to pay tribute to his life and talk about alternatives to suicide.

•This past week the Baltimore Ravens have been negotiating with PSINet Inc., a fast-growing, Northern Virginia based Internet service provider, to name the Ravens downtown stadium. If a deal were to be completed, PSINet could put its corporate name or that of a product or service on the building, such as PSINet Stadium at Camden Yards. Although several issues remain to be worked out, including how much the sponsors would pay for the naming rights, the team is focusing on a deal with PSINet.

•On Tuesday, Nov. 10, the Wicomico Board of Education unveiled a new redistricting plan that draws boundaries for the new middle school to be completed next year. The plan also puts all the county's six-graders into the middle schools and adjusts other school boundaries to achieve better racial balance. The public announcement generated nearly 100 phone calls to the board, most of which were just parents looking for more information, according to the board.

•On Wednesday, Nov. 11, six Snow Hill High School students and the driver of a Worcester County-owned truck were hospitalized with injuries sustained when the truck rear-ended a school bus on Route 113 near Salisbury. Maryland State Police said Wade A. Kolodi, 18, of Selbyville was the driver of a medium-sized deliver-style truck owned by the Worcester County Liquor Board. Kolodi apparently tried to brake but skidded on the wet pavement and struck the rear of the bus. No one was critically injured and the extent of the injuries were said to be cuts, bruises and broken bones.

SGA opens lines of communication

Shelly Duguid
News Editor

Lack of communication is a common problem which heeds and breeds student apathy and an organization's frustration.

In an attempt to solve this everyday dilemma, the Student Government Association has come up with a possible solution: big, bright, fluorescent comment boxes bound to catch an eye and hopefully some suggestions.

The idea sprouted last semester when SGA members recognized the need for more input from the student body.

The SGA started with the library and put a box in the lobby hoping to get the much needed feedback, and it worked.

Now, this semester, the SGA is branching out, planting the comment boxes throughout campus.

"It's a good way for students to communicate with us since email hasn't really been an effective measure," said SGA Senator Andy Ritler.

Comment boxes will now be found in the Commons, Crossroads, Fulton Hall Computer Labs, Gull's Nest, Maggs Gym and one is still in the library.

SGA urges students to take advantage of the comment boxes. For further information, questions or concerns contact an SGA representative, ext. 8-4757.

SSU seeks Student Regent Candidate

Shelly Duguid
News Editor

This month, SSU's University System of Maryland representatives, Andy Ritler and Kasey Schneider along with President William Merwin are accepting candidate applications for the December selection of the USM Student Regent of the Board of Regents.

The government of the System is vested in the Board of Regents, which consists of 17 members, one of which is a full-time student at an institution under the jurisdiction of the Board.

Along with SSU, the University System of Maryland includes 12 other constituent institutions: 11 degree granting campuses and two independent research and service units, which will each submit a single candidate for the running. The USM enrolls over 130,000 students and has an annual budget in excess of $2 billion.

The candidacy is open to any student that wishes to apply. If selected they will compete against 12 other students selected from other institutions across the state.

This year's Student Regent, Susan Woda, is from the University of Maryland at College Park.

USM Representative, Andy Ritler said, "It's been about 10 years since SSU has had one of its students as the Regent, we'd like to see that come to pass again."

The Board of Regents is responsible for the management of the USM and has all the powers, rights and privileges that go with that responsibility, including the power to conduct or maintain any institutions, schools, or departments in the University at the locations the Board determines.

The Student Regent is appointed annually, with term of office being from July 1 to June 30 and is an unpaid position.

The Student Regent has voice and vote in all matters which come before the Board. These issues include establishing tuition for the institutions; reviewing, modifying as necessary; approving the consolidated operating and capital budget requests for appropriations for the System and issuing bonds. The Student Regent also appoints the Chancellor and all institutional presidents, and reviews and approves all plans for the University System and its institutions.

The Regents meet as a full Board approximately eight times per year, with standing committees meeting in between full Board meetings and are expected to represent the USM at state budget hearings.

The Student Regent is expected to attend all meetings of the Board of Regents; the meeting location rotates throughout the campuses of the USM. The Student Regent is also expected to attend the meetings of all the Board committees of which he or she is a member.

Also serving as ex officio on the University System Student Council, the Student Regent acts as an ombudsperson to bring matters of special concern to students to the attention of the Board.

The time commitment of the Student Regent is not inconsequential; fulfilling the duties of the office may require the student to miss scheduled classes or to make other schedule adjustments.

Historically, preparation, meeting attendance, follow-ups and other activities associated with the position, take up between 10 to 15 hours a week.

Interested students can pick up an application in the SGA office or call (410) 548-4757.

Alumni to host Career Day

Amber Pilon
Flyer Staff Writer

Some of SSU's most upstanding alumni will join all participating students for Career Day XI this Thursday. This free seminar will be held in the Wicomico Room of the Guerrieri University Center from 3:30-5 p.m.

All students are invited to attend this event to learn from and rub elbows with those who have gone before them.

In fact, most statistics show that verbal contracts and networking can often get a prospective employee further than any formal interview. Therefore, opportunities such as the Career Day seminar, can truly benefit students.

The day consists of six separate panels: Arts, Culture, Public Relations and Global Communications; Business and Finance; Community Service, Politics and Law; Education and Youth Development; Entrepreneurship, Consulting and Small Business Ownership; and Science, Medicine and Technology.

There will be a total of thirty six alumni participating in these informative presentations.

Some are recent graduates who can expound on the trials and tribulations of entering today's work force will offer hints on how to win the rat race. There are also more experienced alumni who could guide students on how to get more than just their foot in the door.

A few of the involved alumni include Karen Leimann '73, vice principal of the Prince Street Elementary School; Paul Rendine '74, general manager at the Salisbury/Easton area Capitol Securities Management Inc.; Dawn Robinson '84, internal publications coordinator of Perdue Farms; and Dr. Eleanor Stump-Smith '71, director/administrator and physician at Delmarva Health Center.

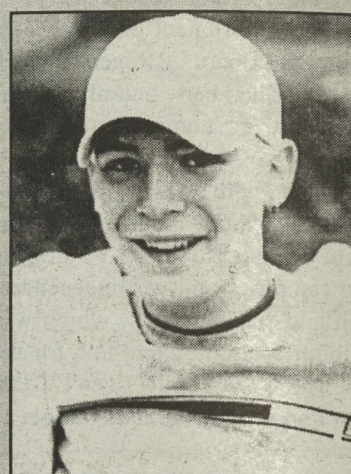

In addition to this seminar, numerous career workshops will be held in the Career Services office throughout the week.

For more information about this event, call Alumni Relations at 410-543-6042.

DWI: A lesson learned

To the editor:

I thought that entering college was going to be the greatest experience of my life. After graduating from high school with a 3.5 grade point average, a new car, and a great group of friends, my life was going in the direction that I had always envisioned it would. Working at a local video store with my best friend helped pass the time, as I could not wait to get to Salisbury State University.

After the days of summer had passed, I found myself away from my parents and household responsibilities, and with my new life, more mature and sophisticated. The first two weeks of college were great; I was meeting new friends, my classes were fun and interesting, and I had lots of time to play intramural soccer, rollerblade, and lift weights. Everything was going great until my second Friday at Salisbury, when I was pulled over by a State Trooper for Driving While Intoxicated.

Being an only child my parents had always been very strict and overprotective. My curfew had never been past midnight and my parents always knew where I was, what I was doing, and who I was with, and what I was doing. So it was no surprise when I was invited to a college party, off campus. All of my friends were there and everyone was having a great time, but it was a little too much for me. I decided that it was time for me to get back to my room, and there were a few others who also wanted to go back to campus. One of my friends was the designated driver, but she and I both thought that I was fine to drive, so she handed me the keys to my car.

On my way back to campus, I incidentally ran a red light, saw the flashing lights behind me, and was pulled over. The police officer took me through all the standard tests, handcuffed me, and took me to the Wicomico Police Department. There I was, all alone, in a place where had never been before, a place where criminals go. It was the most humiliating experience I have ever endured; to use the bathroom, I had to go to a locked cell, where people passing could make eye contact with me on the toilet.

I did not sleep at all for 48 hours. I was alone. All my friends could say was that they were glad they weren't me. I pondered whether or not to tell my parents. I did not want to tell my parents, not because they'd be angry at me, but because of the disappointment that I knew I'd see in their eyes and hear in their voice. When I did tell them they were very disappointed in me. They were also angry with me, but not to the point that I had expected, because they saw how upset I was and everything I had to do my myself in the period of one month.

I had to give up over $500, the money I had been saving up since I was 15, to pay for a lawyer. I barely got to finish soccer, because I had to get a job working in the campus Cafeteria every evening; this was to pay for some of the fines due to my mistake, driving records, and license requests. All of my time is now spent at work, in classes, or studying, so I hardly have any time for lifting weights or rollerblading (and when I do, it is always by myself, because my friends go out most nights.) I have no extra spending money and no time to go out. The people I met here continuously go to parties, so I am left behind because I choose not to go.

For the rest of my life, I will have a flawed driving record, with a big "DWT" on it. I would do anything to take this mistake back, but time can not reverse itself. The one thing I am grateful for is the fact that I am not part of any statistic for killing or injuring anyone during my foolish act of drinking and driving.

Concerns voiced, concerns ignored

To the editor:

At last Sunday's Student Government Association Forum, a concern was voiced by several students about the status of the Gay and Lesbian Alliance (GALA), which has been deemed a "support group" by the SGA, and not a registered student organization (RSO).

In order to be recognized as a student organization on campus, clubs must fulfill the requirement of attending at least two SGA Forums. GALA, however, has been exempted from this requirement by the SGA as they have been deemed a "support group."

Even though GALA has not met the same requirements that other student organizations must meet, they are still accorded all rights and privileges associated with RSO status. We believe that this is a double standard and wrong because all clubs must meet the same standards and requirements, and to discriminate in this manner is not ethical and even-handed.

When this issue was brought forth in the Forum, SGA leaders attempted to change the subject and not address this matter in public, nor for the record. These same leaders claimed that GALA is not required to attend because of the amount of discrimination and intolerance at our liberal arts institution.

We feel that these student leaders are not embracing the idea of tolerance and instead are encouraging sensitive issues to be brushed aside, ignored, and removed from the arena of discourse.

We are concerned that our so-called unbiased "representatives" acted in this manner which is clearly in sharp contrast with the goals of a University: the development and encouragement of discourse, debate, and equality of opportunity.

Nellie Mae: A student's friend

Amber Pilon
Flyer Staff Writer

Dealing with college loans can be a pain. However, not only can Nellie Mae ease the aching, but its special services save students from squandering their stashes.

Nellie Mae is a nationwide loan agency that provides affordable subsidized and unsubsidized federal or private loans. Since 1982, Nellie Mae has loaned more than $5.6 billion to 1.5 million to students and families.

To make loan information easily accessible for today's computer-oriented students, Nellie Mae established a website three years ago. Recently, this company updated its site to offer Loan Link calculators and budget worksheets, as well as comprehensive debt counseling for students before, during and after their college stays.

Through this counseling, students are able to take a realistic look at their own estimated, post-graduation income in relation to how much they've borrowed and the total cost of four (or five) years at a given college.

In other words, Nellie Mae helps pupils see whether or not the amount they would like to borrow is more than they can finance.

Ultimately, 10-12 percent of undergraduates' post-grad incomes is expected to go towards loan repayment. For graduate students, the amount is 15-18 percent of their paychecks.

An easier way of figuring out numbers is that if, for example, a student hopes to make $25,000 after college and his loan total is $20,000, he should be able to repay it. However, if his loan total is the same but his expected income is $15,000, he might just run into trouble.

Nellie Mae's Vice President of Public Affairs, Diane Saunders, explained that the average student loan debt accumulated over an entire college stay is currently $18,800. Last year's statistics break that figure down into public and private school students' averages, which is $11,000 and $16,000 respectively.

With figures such as these, it's amazing that more students don't take advantage of Nellie Mae's special repayment plan, EDvantages. Through this plan, if a student's financial record shows at least 48 consecutive months of on-time payment, he or she qualifies for some EDvantages. Students can choose from a two percent interest rate reduction or a payment of the last six installments.

Saunders related that the six month payment is the better deal. Nevertheless, most students accept the rate reduction for more instantaneous results. This decision is understandable, though. Nellie Mae's current interest rates are approximately seven percent, which would drop to a low five percent if a student chose the rate reduction.

Their rates can decrease even more. If the loan payments are directly deducted from the student's checking account, he or she automatically receives a fourth of a percentage point reduction from their interest rate.

Nellie Mae also offers a time out for students in times of unemployment or extremely low income. Time outs can last for about three years. However, the time allowed varies with the severity of the situation.

Many times, students need to take a year or two off and reenter the work force to accumulate funding. Saunders noted that students who are facing debt problems must reconsider other factors to save some money. Acquiring more roommates or driving a car of lesser value are two popular options.

Often, though, according to Saunders, students get the "ostrich effect, ducking their heads in the sand." This means that because an honest look at their financial situation is too intimidating, students avoid doing so altogether. However, it is better to face the situation, and possibly even rethink a loan plan, than to realize later that too much has been borrowed.

To access EDvantages, Loan Links or to check the status of a pending loan application, visit the Nellie Mae website www.nelliemae.com or call 1-800-9-TUITION for the free brochure "Take the Right Road."

SSU employee mingles with stars

Did you ever dream of meeting a movie star, but you didn't have the time or the money to make it out to Hollywood? Well, now, without even leaving the campus, this dream can become a reality. Director of Student Activities and Organizations Joe Oravec was picked to be an extra in the Hollywood movie Runaway Bride, starring Julia Roberts and Richard Gere.

Open call auditions were held in Berlin, MD, where the movie was filmed. According to Oravec, he originally had no plans to try out for a part. However, on the day of the auditions, he left campus early for an appointment. Hearing an advertisement on the radio, he decided to stop by. Upon arrival, Oravec found himself waiting for several hours in line to eventually hold up a number and have his picture taken.

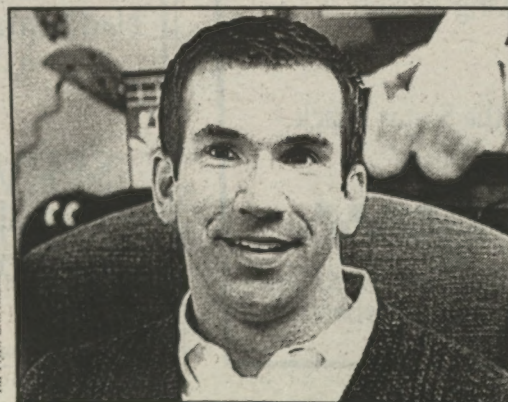

Upon leaving, Oravec commented that he was sure that he had no chance of being picked. However, he was proved wrong when a letter arrived in the mail exclaiming that he had been selected as an extra.

"I thought it was a rejection letter," Oravec commented. "When I opened it up, I just laughed and couldn't believe it."

On Oct. 26, Oravec showed up at Snow Hill High School at six in the morning. At this point, he had no idea what part he would be playing. He and the other selected extras stood in a line while the casting coordinator assigned them their parts. Oravec was given the part of a first base coach during a softball game.

After receiving his part, Oravec filled out various paperwork, and then went on to wardrobe. His costume consisted of a pair of long pants and a sweatshirt bearing the name Hale High School. It was then out to the softball field to set up the scene. In his position by first base, Oravec got the privilege of meeting director Gary Marshall, who had given himself a cameo part as the first base and an honor to Oravec, who was able to hold a conversation with Marshall throughout the day.

According to Oravec, he wasn't the only one to become famous that day. His truck was also given a "part" in the movie. For both the use of his truck and acting, Oravec was paid. Food was also offered throughout the day, provided by a Californian catering company.

Oravec described the experience as "very surreal...I still can't believe it actually happened. I was in awe the whole time."

Though it is not guaranteed that Oravec will appear in the movie after the final cuts are made, he feels that his chances are good due because Marshall's placement was so close to him. However, he'll have to wait until next summer when the movie comes out in theaters to be sure.

Who's Who AT SSU?

Spectacular Student: Dave Betti

A weekly look at SSU's excellent academics

Jennifer Martin
Flyer Staff Writer

When he wakes up every morning, senior Dave Betti knows that he will have to spend three and a half hours working out. He practices his boxing punches everyday from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. and runs four to five miles a night. Betti admitted that although boxing is time consuming, it is his favorite sport.

Betti has always been active in sports, especially during high school. While attending Lindenhurst High School in New York, Betti played tennis and volleyball. He also ran track and wrestled for two years. Furthermore, Betti was a member of the surf club and treasurer of the ski club. Not only was Betti consumed with school activities, but since the age of twelve he consistently worked weekends and summers on a fishing boat. "I helped people out, cut bait, and cleaned out the fish," said Betti.

Currently majoring in biology and concentrating in pre-med, Betti arrived at SSU in the fall of 1995 after learning about the school through a friend of his mother's. "I wanted to go to a small school and when I arrived I really liked it."

With his interest in medicine, Betti hopes to be a cardiologist. Last summer he volunteered in the emergency room of Good Samaritan hospital in New York. Betti observed several emergency situations, fed patients, carried blood samples and helped perform many small, but crucial tasks. Betti enjoyed his position, because he really "liked the teamwork."

Betti not only practices hard when it comes to boxing, but he has the same determination when it comes to his school work. With an overall GPA of 3.5 and a 3.9 GPA in his biology major alone, Betti has been honored by making the National Dean's List. Betti said that he enjoys his small classes and the fact that the professors give students individual recognition. Betti admitted that his loaded schedule is stressful, which boxing practice helps alleviate. He also enjoys snow boarding, surfing, boating and of course, fishing.

Betti's interest in fishing is what helped him to get his job on the New York docks and as First Mate on a fishing boat. Betti made three 4 hour trips a day and made sure that everyone was equipped with bait and happy with their surroundings. This January, Betti hopes to move up a notch to Captain. To qualify, Betti needs at least 750 hours days "on deck" and he must pass a seven hour exam.

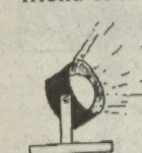

Betti describes himself as "hard-working, intelligent and outgoing." However, Betti particularly likes helping people, this is why he would like to be a doctor. Yet, Betti would like to take a year off and attend medical school in the fall of 2000.

But for now, Betti continues to practice. As captain of the SSU boxing team, he is eagerly looking forward to a practice with Navy after Thanksgiving.

Betti will continue to work both at school and in the ring. His ultimate goal is the "championships this March in Reno." With his strength, hard work and perseverance, Betti will certainly go far in whichever career he chooses - whether it be a championship fight or a surgical procedure.

Senior Dave Betti spent his summer in New York as First Mate on a fishing boat.

Spotlight on Gloria Horner

Dana Cassidy
Flyer Staff Writer

For Gloria Horner, work experience coordinator in Career Services, SSU has become an integral part of her life. She has lived in Somerset County all her life, and has been at SSU, either pushing towards her educational goals or working, virtually non-stop, since 1975.

Horner began working on her bachelor's degree in history in 1975, and completed her master's degree in history in 1995. In the meantime, she was either taking care of her family or working.

Horner described herself as a "non-traditional" student in her early days at SSU. She managed to raise two sons as she worked on her bachelor's degree, and used her education as an outlet for daily stresses.

"It was my therapy. It was the one thing I could do totally, and have total control over. I got out of it exactly what I put into it. So, if it was a success, it was a success because I earned it. It got me away from babies and diapers and soap operas, and all the things that are associated with being a house wife, which I was," Horner reminisced.

Horner began working at SSU in telecommunications and work experience. She made the leap to Career Services when the university merged work experience and Career Services in September 1997. Since that time, Gloria has become an integral part of Career Services and immerses herself in a little bit of everything there.

Officially, Horner is the coordinator of work experience, and unofficially the "resume guru." According to Patsy Somers, administrative assistant in Career Services, "Gloria does everything," and Michelle Adkins jokingly piped in that Horner is the "Resident torture artist."

Horner is responsible for helping those in need, and makes sure everything is in order for a student's employment. Freshman Michael Lowe said, "Gloria helped me in many ways. She helped me get my first job here when I was still in high school. Plus, she helped me make more money by explaining my taxes to me, and she helps me with my job changes and all the paperwork involved. That was the biggest help because I wouldn't have been able to do it all. Plus, she gave me candy!"

The professionalism and dedication of Career Services has its foundation in a staff that consistently goes above and beyond the call of duty. Horner, and the entire staff, take the time to learn your name, help you discover hidden qualities, help you search for the best opportunities and continually propose ideas often not thought of as students make the transition into the "real world."

Career Services has something for everyone. They can help you develop or refine your resume, help you locate an internship, give you the low-down on graduate school or guide you in relocating upon graduation. All this, and service with a smile!

When Horner is not in Career Services helping students in one way or another, you can probably find her in one of two places. She is either teaching History 102 on Wednesday nights in Caruthers Hall, or being a "mom" to the Science Fiction Club. She is a self-admitted "Trekkie" - not the New Generation, but the classic kind.

Horner also has a passion for traveling, particularly to England's countryside. She has been there twice and said, "I just feel like I'm home when I'm there."

If you need a little help with your resume, career planning, or just about anything else dealing with your future, drop by Career Services. They will be glad to help, and Horner will be the first person you see smiling at you.

Gloria Horner of Career Services is a faculty favorite.

Hedda Gabler takes the stage

Kate Montero
Features Editor

Tomorrow, Wednesday, Nov. 18, Salisbury can view a 19th century masterpiece in Fulton Hall's Black Box Theatre.

With a run lasting straight through Monday, Nov. 23, Henrik Ibsen's Hedda Gabler, directed by communication arts faculty member Robert Smith, will enable Salisbury to view a play considered scandalous by 19th century audiences.

This play focuses around a woman - Hedda Gabler - who did not want to be placed under the gender restrictions of her age.

Senior Heather Crutchfield was cast in this title role, and explained her character as, "a caged bird [who is] bored with her perch in life, and living vicariously through others." Crutchfield continued, "She is trapped in her role as a woman, an unsatisfactory marriage and a house she despises. This drives her to some interesting actions and scandalous conclusions."

Being cast in such a challenging and rich role was both a surprise and an honor for Crutchfield who said her original response was, "Oh my God, you've got to be kidding me!"

Many of the cast members are newcomers to the SSU theatre department. Junior Jason LaGarde, who will be playing the passionate Eiler Lovborg, said that he never expected to see his name on the cast list. When he found out he got the role, he said, "I was both shocked and pleased."

While LaGarde admitted that rehearsal is more serious than he had become accustomed to in high school and community productions, he said that this experience has been, "very educational and enlightening. I'm very pleased with my experiences so far."

Sophomore Katie Profili, who is playing the role of the innocent and good intentioned Thea Elvstead, is no stranger to the SSU Theatre Department. This is, however, her first major role.

Profili commented, "One of my friends actually told me that I was on the cast list before I saw it myself. I didn't believe him, so I came over myself to look. It was great, what a rush! I was very excited and eager to start work on the show as soon as possible."

Ibsen created a play very rich in character development and emotional content. This has created a play that is not only rewarding visually, but it also creates a plethora of details for the actors to concern themselves with.

Senior Trish Eckstein is stage managing this show. She held this position in Smith's last production, The Three Sisters, and she said that this production has been a similar experience for her. Eckstein credited the actors with spending many hours learning their lines and their blocking. "They [the actors] are doing a great job with this show."

Senior Jeff Parsons will be playing the role of Judge Brack, a sadistic and cunning man. He admitted that this role has been very challenging for him.

"I have had to drop my voice down an octave, and have had to change how I walk and interact with other cast members to achieve the upright and sinister side of my character," Parsons said.

Parsons also had to make drastic changes to his appearance in order to gain the right look for the character. A hair dresser was used to dye the hair of several cast members.

However, Parsons was the only cast member that was asked to shave the top portion of his head. "It was difficult doing this, but it does help me to achieve the look of a forty-year-old man."

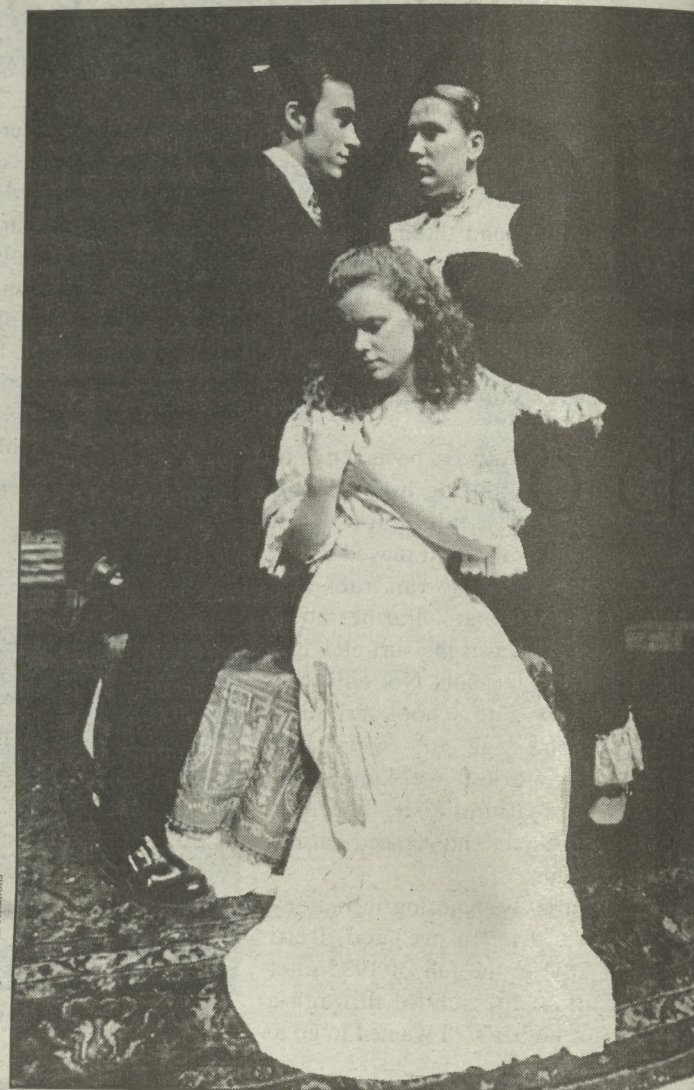

While each of the cast members are struggling with their character interpretations and line memorization, they all seem to agree on one thing - working with Smith has been an incredible experience.

Profili spoke of her time with Smith. "He helps you to find things within yourself that you never knew were there."

Parsons agreed when he said, "I have enjoyed learning Robert's innovative view points on different issues in the play. He thinks in a way that is very unique and insightful."

The cast member's also agree that this cast has become tight in a very professional manner. Crutchfield explained, "It is always great to be exposed to a new group of people whom you become very dependent on over the course of rehearsals."

With opening night already here, Eckstein admitted that there are still a lot of little details to be taken care of, but the cast and crew couldn't be more excited. Gerry Patt, a member of the communication arts faculty has designed and created an incredible set, worthy of visual splendor, while senior Jocelyn Wright has spent much time overseeing the making of and rental of costumes that accurately represent the Victorian period.

LaGarde exclaimed, "I'm really looking forward to it [the show]. I think it will really go well, and if we can have fun with it at the same time, I will just be thrilled."

Profili had a similar response. "I think we are all extremely excited. We've put a lot of time into the show and worked really hard as a group. We're ready to see the results of all our efforts."

Crutchfield's role of Hedda has her not only excited, but she is scared and nervous as well. "I am basically running through a gamut of emotions. I'm sad because it is my last show at SSU, but happy because I am confident about my performance. I'm a total schizophrenic right now, I swear!"

All performances are at 8 p.m., except Sunday, Nov. 22, which is a 2 p.m. matinee. Tickets are $7 general admission, $5 for students and senior citizens and free for SSU students with I.D. For reservations, call the SSU Box Office at 410-543-6228.

Two SSU theatre auditions bring opportunities to students

Auditions for Vanities, one of the most successful off-Broadway plays of all time, will be Sunday-Tuesday, Nov. 22-24, at SSU.

Auditions are from 7-9 p.m. in Room 203 Fulton Hall. Open call is Sunday and Monday, with callbacks on Tuesday.

Vanities will rehearse in early December, stop for the University's holiday break, then resume in January. Performances are January 27-31 in the Fulton Hall Theatre.

Vanities charts the lives of three women during the 1960s who are cheerleaders in high school, then college sorority sisters. When they gather for a reunion 10 years later, their lives are vastly different from their youthful expectations.

All three roles are open and there are no age restrictions for those auditioning. "The only prerequisite is the three actresses cast must be of the same generation," said play director Richard Culver. SSU theatre is an open program and all interested students, faculty, staff and members of the community are encouraged to audition. A copy of the script is on reserve in Blackwell Library on campus.

The University Theatre Program also will soon be casting its spring musical, A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum, directed by Director of Theatre T. Paul Pfeiffer. Auditions for this show will be held Monday, Nov. 30, and Tuesday, Dec. 1 in the Fulton Hall choral room 142. Those interested should prepare a song not from the show, but in the same spirit. An accompanist will be provided.

Rehearsal for Vanities and Forum will not conflict, and individuals will be able to audition and perform in both.

For more information on Vanities, contact Culver at 410-543-6030 daytime, or 410-749-4776 night. For more information on Forum, contact Pfeiffer at 410-543-6235.

Hard work, unselfishness pay off for Men's Soccer this season

Shawn Kieselmann
Flyer Sports Writer

It was not by luck or accident that this year's Men's Soccer team finished their season as runners-up in the Capitol Athletic Conference Tournament for the second straight year. According to head coach Gerry DiBartolo, this year's squad was geared up to make an impact from the very beginning.

"During the off season, the players trained very hard," said the veteran coach. "They came into the season in great shape. We were prepared early on."

The work ethic and mentality instilled in this team allowed them to accomplish a lot in 1998. In a game against Gallaudet, for instance, the Gulls broke the SSU record for goals in a single game and margin of victory in a 13-0 shutout. They also managed to break the record for wins in a season with a stellar record of 15-4-1. The men's season included nine shutouts along with ten straight games without a loss. Such achievements carried them into the CAC finals where they would lose a heartbreaker to York by a score of 1-2.

According to coach DiBartolo, the biggest reason for the Seagull's success this year was the immense amount of unselfishness that was exhibited by his players.

"Players were willing to sacrifice individual accomplishments for the betterment of the team," stated DiBartolo. "They were all willing to play different positions and accept different amounts of playing time."

One such example of this unselfish attitude was seen in senior standout Mike Giuffrida. Normally an effective forward, Giuffrida agreed to play as a midfielder all season for the sake of his team. Giuffrida did exceptionally well as a midfielder too, leading the team with ten assists, racking up ten goals, and finishing his career with 93 points.

Giuffrida was not the only contributor however. Coach DiBartolo adamantly believes that the 1998 season was a team effort, and that there were many contributors to the success. He said, "We had five or six players who were very dangerous offensively. An opponent couldn't just isolate one player. That was a real advantage to our team."

Mike Giuffrida (#4) proved to be an important component to SSU's Men's Soccer team's success this season.

One player in particular that teams had a tough time containing was freshman phenom Paul Kelly. Kelly led the Gulls and the rest of the CAC in scoring, with fourteen goals and 35 overall points.

"Paul has a nose for the goal," explains DiBartolo. "He is a young man who is a stereotypic forward, and he has the ability to be in the right spot at the

Swim team off to a strong start

Andy Levin
Flyer Staff Writer

This season for the Swim team has so far proven to be one packed with action, thrills and broken records. "We hope to do well in the Conference. We are hoping to improve on last year's disappointing 4th place finish in the conference," said Head Coach Jill Stephensen, returning for her 4th year as head coach.

The Gulls have 10 returning women and 6 returning men. Combined with strong showings from freshmen Brendan Roddy and Julie Wood, the Seagulls look to improve on last year's 2-6 CAC record. Already, the team is showing progress with a current CAC record of 2-1. Team captains Jeff Waltz, Mike Nusbaum, Jen Herzig, and Rebecca Mitchell have all shown improvements from last year as well.

Sophomore Allison Calcaterra already received a bid to attend the national championship in the 50 and 100 freestyle. Roddy has broken a pool record in the 800 freestyle event as well.

The schedule for the Sea Gulls is tough. "Goucher and St. Mary's are always tough, but we look stronger," Stephensen replied. York College will also prove to be a competitive match.

Coach Stephensen believes strongly in the need for support of the team's efforts. "To have a solid season we need support from the student body." So come out and cheer for your swimming Sea Gulls.

Gull Takes Seagulls fall in shoot-out, 52-45

WAYNE, N.J. - With 1,053 combined yards Friday night, several SSU offensive records fell. Unfortunately, the win-loss record also fell in the Gulls' final 1998 game of the season.

Quarterback Matt Main was 19-for-27 for 320 yards and four touchdowns, but the near perfect night was spoiled by an equally prolific offensive performance by host William Paterson, which scored twice in the game's final two minutes to pull out a 52-45 win.

Both teams finished the 1998 season with 3-7 records.

Among the offensive records that fell was total points. The 97 combined points Friday eclipsed the 96-point total the Gulls posted in a 49-47 loss to Wesley in 1994.

Also, tight end Ryan Brooks tied a school record by becoming the first Gull since 1992 to catch three touchdown passes in a single game and he became just the third Gull in school history to ever catch three in a game (Shawn Powell in 1992 and John Harris in 1984 were the others).

SSU positioned itself to win the game when its punt late in the fourth quarter with the game tied at 38 was downed at the William Paterson one-yard line.

But William Paterson promptly drove 99 yards in 15 plays to take a 45-33 lead with 1 minute 37 seconds remaining.

After returning the ensuing kickoff to its own 35-yard line, SSU then proceeded to drive 65 yards in less than a minute to tie the game at 45 on a Main-to-Ellis 11-yard pass with just 36 seconds left.

William Paterson avoided the seemingly imminent overtime by returning the kickoff to the SSU 31-yard line and then punching it in on a miraculous 22-yard touchdown pass with 6 seconds left.

After a nine-yard run, William Paterson quarterback Jamie Golden threw into the endzone and his pass was bobbled by SSU defensive back Tony Hill before falling into the hands of Paterson receiver Donnie Seymour, who was on his knees.

SSU's Tony Ellis rushed 23 times for 168 yards and Myron Dent carried 11 times for 52 yards and a touchdown. Wide receiver Haki Lee caught six balls for 118 yards.

Turkey Trot headlines intramural activities

Andrew Gilchrist
Special to The Flyer

Well, it is that time again, when the turkeys are scared and SSU gets ready to run. Yes folks, it is time for the annual Turkey Trot 5K Fun Run. This Thursday, Nov. 19, at 4 p.m., the intramural program will turn our campus into a speed track for students, faculty and staff.

This event is sponsored by Conectiv, who have donated 400 T-shirts for the race. The first 400 to finish will receive T-shirts. Also, the first place finishers in each division will receive a turkey. The second place finishers in each division will receive cider. And the third place finishers in each division will receive apples.

The race is 5 kilometers (3.1 miles), and involves two laps around the campus. This event has predominantly been one of our most popular, with a good balance of male and female participants, and an equally strong number of faculty and staff. There are those that choose to run at their own leisurely pace, while other (i.e. Tim Smith) choose to hold nothing back and make a run for the title. But for all, the afternoon is not only enjoyable, but also rewarding.

Interested participants may come by the Campus Recreation Office in the Maggs Gym to pick up registration forms. Check in time for the day of the race is 3:30 p.m., and will take place in the main foyer of the gym. As mentioned earlier, the race will begin at 4:00 p.m., so come by early to pick up your number and stretch out for the event.

Team of the Week: Disc Dawgs of the Co-Rec Ultimate Frisbee League. The Dawgs finished the regular season a perfect 3-0 and were totally pumped for the playoffs. In fact, they were so ready for the playoffs that their first opponent didn't even show up. So it was on to the championship game to face the number three seat, No Floaters. The two teams met once during the regular season, a game in which the Dawgs pummeled No Floaters, 18-2. So it was easy to assume that the Disc Dawgs were the overwhelming favorites going into the final.

However, the No Floaters put on a valiant effort and were only trailing by one point at the half. The second half was pretty much the same, but slowly and surely, the Disc Dawgs began to pull away, and took the Championship by a final of 11-7. All teams should be commended for their great sportsmanship and their exciting brand of play. For those of you who did not get a chance to play this fall, I strongly encourage you to give it a try. Congratulations again to the Disc Dawgs and all other competitors for making the season a great success.

sweeper Darren LaRocque proved to be the core of a strong defensive backbone. LaRockque, along with Kevin Rhoades, who also changed positions from middle to back, did a good job stopping the opponents' offense. Their intensity combined with goalie Mike Svehla and his 58 saves made up an intimidating obstacle for SSU's CAC rivals.

The team will lose five seniors, including three starters: Mike Giuffrida, Kevin Rhoades, and Brian Doherty. With eight of eleven starters returning next season, Coach DiBartolo seems optimistic about next year.

"Next year's team has all the makings to be as good as this year's, if not better," claims DiBartolo. "It could even challenge for an NCAA bid. It all depends on the offseason and next year's recruits."

NEW CAMPUS CARD

Beginning Spring Semester - 1999, Salisbury State University's new campus identification card will be necessary for all campus transactions by students, faculty and staff. The new card will be far more versatile than the existing system and will provide conveniences to students and staff not currently available.

Instead of having to use cash, for example, the card may be used for snacks in the campus vending machines or for books in the Bookrack. The system will keep track of the balance remaining on your card. More information will be provided indentifying the opportunities and the "How To . . ."s as the implementation date(s) get closer. However, it is important, at this time, that you be aware that this card will replace your campus identification card. As such, effective Spring semester, your current identification card can no longer be used, BUT DON'T THROW IT AWAY. You'll be trading it for a new card.

With 6,000 students and 1,200 faculty and staff, we don't want to imagine how long the line would be at the beginning of the next semester if we waited until then to take all the pictures and hand out all the cards. So . . . we need your help!

What you need to do:

If you're a student, get your picture taken before you leave at the end of the semester. We suggest faculty and staff have your pictures taken before the beginning of next semester also.

Get your picture taken:

November 16, 1998 through December 18, 1998: Commons Building Room 2, and Holloway Hall Room 216. Monday through Thursday from 8:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m.

After December 18, 1998: Holloway Hall, Room 216, during normal business hours (8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.)

We'll try to make this transition as easy as possible.
